THE KING-WHALEN FEUD.

FOR A TIME IT WAS CONFINED TO IMPOLITE LANGUAGE.

Finally the Women Got the Men to Take Fart, and Nearly All Hands Went to the Hospital - A Tenement Episode, Other localities in Brooklyn have worse repulations than the lower part of Douglass street, but this neighborhood has a reputation all its own. According to the police view of it there aren't so very many fights there, but when there is a fight something breaks. There was a fight there on Thursday night and several things broke. Among them were John King's head, Whalen's front tooth on the left side, two chairs, the hall bannisters, Mrs. King's growler, and the record on Sergeant's Maude's books at the Butler street station for ambulance calls in a single case. All the principals in the fight except one, Mrs. King, went to the hospital.

No other fundamental cause for the disturb-ance is discoverable, except the fact that the Whalens and the Kings are neighbors, and have been for five years, the period of residence of the Kings at 81 Douglass street. Therefore, Mrs. King and Mrs. Whalen quarrelled. Frequently has Douglass street held its breath while Mrs. Whalen has called Mrs. King out of her name and Mrs. King, filled with the spirit of repartee, has retorted that Mrs. Whalen was no lady. Hitherto the male portion of the two families has not been drawn into the struggle.

"Let 'em talk. It's only the ways of the women," was the sentiment of the husbands, Thomas Whalen and John King, and of Thomas, the grown-up son of the King family, all of whom puffed their pipes, drank their beer, and preserved a solemn peacefulness as befits honest and hard-working men when the day's labor is done. Maybe it was the heat that was the immediate occasion of the row. At any rate, it drove Thomas Whalen out late in the evening with the family growler in his hand in search of foam-crowned humidity at eight cents per portion. As he passed the King doorway Mrs. King was treating her family to the three hundred and forty-sixth chapter, sixteenth verse, of the trials and tribulations of a quiet and well-dis-trials and tribulations of a quiet and well-disposed lady left alone in the same house with Oatherine Whalen, and this was her refrain.

"If you had the sperrit of a man, either of you, you'd not let your wife an' mother be insulted into her own house. You'd take it out of old Whalen's hide."

"Oh, what's the matter now?" asked the men. Then followed a list of grievances that would make a strike committee feel like amateurs. Either Mrs. King was unusually eloquent on this occasion, or the heat, or the mixed ale that they had been drinking, or a combination of all, gave a martial spirit to the family. The senior King went out to look for Whalen and met him in the hallway.

"It seems your old woman has been making trouble for mine," observed King.

"There is others," returned Whalen, airily.
"Perhaps it's your old woman is the trouble maker. Annyway, its only women's ways. Let

"Perhaps it's your ould woman is the trouble maker. Annyway, its only women's ways. Let em fight it out." he concluded, and proceeded on his way for his beer.
On his return he met in the hall Thomas King, the son, who continued on the same subject.
"How is it Mrs. Whalen can't keep a decent tongue in her head," he demanded.
"Keep yer own tongue in yer own head an' nobody won't paint it green," was the apporism with which Mr. Whalen favored the accuser of the King family.

"Your's pretty gauxy yourself," observed the other"

Now there is one expression particularly de-signed for just such occasions as this. Mr. Whalen used it.

Now there is one expression particularly degreed for just such occasions as this. Mr. Whalen used it.

"Go to hell!" he said, and proceeded up stairs. "Ill follow you there," reforted the younger man, climbing the stairs after him.

At this point Mrs. Whalen appeared at the head of the stairs with a large club in her hand. It was not necessarily for use, she afterward explained, but you never can tell when a club is going to be handy. So Mrs. Whalen brandished her club while her husband and Thomas King said things to each other. Just then John King, the father, appeared in his doorway, and hearing the remarks ran up stairs, leaving a plece of his ahirt in the grasp of his wife, who had endeavored to restrain firm. As the senior King reached the head of the stairs Whalen snatched the club from his wife and banged him over the head with it. John King wrenched a piece of the bannisters loose and poked it into Whalen's abdomen, getting a bang from the club that increased his height by two-thirds of an inch, the precise measurement of the lump that arose upon the top of his head. Both Kings arose and seized Whalen, and the fight was on. Mrs. King, from below, gave her moral support by shouting the inspiriting battle cry:

"Sockettuem! Sockettuem good!" which rang high and clear above the roar of battle, Mrs. Whalen, having secured two handfuls of the King brand of hair without any appreciable influence on the combatants, suddenly bethought herself of the growler. She raised it high in air, Bang! It landed on the head of Thomas King and smashed to bits, but not without serious damage to the head, from which blood flowed and mingled with the lager. This hypodermic injection of beer only seemed to invigorate the patient, who seized Whalen, he went too. When the lump of humanity reached the bottom Mrs. King came out and jumped on it, but Mrs. Whalen soon drove her off with a volley of chairs and smashed are rickes from above. Then ahe leaped, spread out like a flying squirrel, and landed gracefully upon her husband's ne

The others were discharged from the hospital, but Whalen is locked up in the Butier street station house awaiting arraignment. King will also be arraigned on his recovery. DEATH OF A BUNCOER'S VICTIM. Aged Bobert Calder Couldn't Forgive Himself for Being Swindled,

The death of Robert Calder on Wednesday at his home at 62 Hanson place, Brooklyn, is be-Beved to have been hastened through his chagrin at allowing himself to have been victimised by a bunco steerer at the ripe age of 82. Until seven years ago, when he retired with a comfortable fortune, he had been continuously amployed by the Union Ferry Company in a re-sponsible post for over fifty years. In Nosponsible post for over fifty years. In November last, when out walking, he fell in with a bunco sieerer, and was induced to accompany him to a gambling resort in Willoughby street. There the old man became so fascinated with the game in progress that he went around to the Frankin Trust Company and returned to the den with certified checks for $2.000. Of course, the checks disappeared quickly, and Mr. Calder contented himself by denouncing the swindlers, simply going home to broad over his folly.

Some days afterward his wife discovered that the bonds on which he procured the certified checks were missing, and it was in this way the police were notified. No arcests were made and Mr. Calder's health broke down from the day he was swindled, and not a day passed that he did not lament his folity.

M'RANE'S FORLORS HOPE. Mis Conviction Affirmed by the General Term-He Will Appenl.

John Y. McKane sustained a discounted defeat yesterday in his persistent legal battle to get out of prison and cause his political career The General Term of the Supreme Court in Brooklyn handed down its decision on the ap-peal for a new trial, and all the Judges agree that the conviction should stand. The opinion, which is very voluminous, covering each exception taken on the trial, was written by Jus-tice Landon and Chief Justice Brown and Justice Dykeman concur. As to the charge that McKane entered into a conspiracy with the election inspectors to suppress the registry lists, Justice Landon says: The evidence given tended to prove the conspiracy was circumstantial in its character, from the very nature of it. Part of the evidence tending to prove a conspiracy tended also to prove what the conspirators did in furtherance of it. While the general rule is that a conspiracy must be shown before the acts and declara-tions of the conspirators and other than the defendant upon trial can be admitted in evidence, yet this rule, wisely framed for the protection of the defendant, is not so urged as to require a sacrifice of truth and substance to matters of form in order to forbid the trial Judge to receive evidence in such order or to such ex-form in order to forbid the trial Judge to receive evidence in such order or to such extent as will develop as clearly as possible the whole truth. It may be well that the whole story must be told before the Court or Jury can be sufficiently instructed to pass definitely upon the preliminary fact, the conspiracy itself. The harrative all told, it may yet be such a disputed question that the defendant is entitled to have the jury pass upon it. It may, therefore, in order that justice be sated at the threshold of the trial, be left entirely to the discretion of the trial, be left entirely to the discretion of the trial court to determine as to the order of proofs.

"We must look at the whole evidence to see whether fact of the conspiracy was sufficiently proved to justify the admission of the acts and declaration of the defendent co-conspirators as part of the very res gestæ of the attempted execution of the conspiracy itself."

After reviewing the testimony and sustaining the charge of Justice Bartlett to the jury as entirely fair to the accused, Justice Landon concludes:

"The foregoing opinion is mainly confined to the exceptions taken upon the trial, which the defendant presses upon our attention, as seemed to us worthy of written mention. This examination served to develop to some extent the nature of the case. We do not think it necessary to undertake the additional labor to quote and arrange in order the testimony given to a clear presentation of the whole case. It will suffice to say that we have examined, and the examination satisfied us that the verdict as offered is justified by the evidence.

Lawyer Roderick at once gave notice that he would go to the Court of Appeals. He also notified McKane by telegraph of the adverse decision.

Col. Victor Bausenwein, Benjamin Cohen, and W. Lyons, the Gravesend inspectors of election, completed yesterday their term of four months' imprisonment in the Crow Hill penientiary for their participation in the McKane tentiary for their participation in the McKane rebellion and were released. In addition to his imprisonment Cohen had to pay a fine of $500. They had been at work at landscape gardening all the time they were in the prison and each looked in much better shape than when they arrived there. Cohen was met at the entrance to the prison by his wife and two sons and drove down with them to Coney Island. The remaining Gravesend prisoners at Crow Hill are Fred Bader, Michael P. DECIDED AGAINST ENO.

His Claim for $450,000 Against Seymone, Baker & Co., Brokers,

The speculations of John C. Eno are recalled y a report of ex-Surrogate Daniel G. Rollins, as referee, in the action brought by Broker Arthur Dyett against James M. Seymour, James A. Baker, and A. Louis Seymour (Seymour, Baker & Co.), stock brokers, to recover $450.-000. Referes Rollins recommended the dismissal of the complaint.

Eno's Wall street dealings were largely in Oregon Transcontinental, Reading, Union Pa-cific, and St. Paul. While he was in Canada Eno claimed to have discovered that his brokers, Seymour, Baker & Co., had not dealt fairly with him, and that there was due him from the brokers about $450,000. He assigned this claim to Dyett, to whom he was indebted on account of stock transactions. Eno declared that the transactions in which a large part of the money was lost were never made in good faith by the brokers, and that he was entitled to the amount of the commissions which had been paid to them and alro to the money lost.

The case was originally brought to trial in 1880 before Judge Patterson of the Supreme Court. A juror who was sitting on the case disappeared and all efforts to find him were fruitless. The case was then taken out of court, and in February, 1890, was sent for trial to ex-Surregate Rullins as referee. He finds that the reports which they had for him were not fraudulent. The report will be presented to the court for confirmation. Eno claimed to have discovered that his Ington. WASHINGTON, July 27 .- The mystery in regard to the origin of the fatal Knox fire is be-ginning to unravel. W. T. Harris, an inventor, was arrested last night on suspicion of having caused the fire. Harris was in the Knox building when the fire started, working at an old gas line motor which he kept there, and was hadly burned. He was seen by several persons as he ran out of the building and then he disappeared. The police believe that while working about the gasoline motor he caused the explosion which burned the building. He was taken to the Emergency Hospital, where he is in charge of an officer. His left hand and arm are seriously burned and his throat and lungs are sore from inhaled flames. He acknowledged that he was in the Knox building atthe time the fire started, but denies that he did anything to cause it. Harris's statements on on agree with statements made by A. L. HE PLEADED HIS OWN CASE JUDGE BOOKSTAVER TRIED TO CUT HIM OFF WITH A "SAW."

It Was No Go-He Had to Talk, and He Got His Wife Allmony and a Counsel Fee with Ease-Wife Wasted to Talk. Mrs. Henrietta Schroeder has brought a suit for separation from her husband, Frederick Schroeder, and asked Judge Bookstaver in the Court of Common Pleas yesterday for alimony and counsel fees pending the trial of the suit. The defendant was in court but had not secured counsel, ami Judge Bookstaver advised him to

Because of her husband's ill treatment Mrs. Schroeder withdrew the money and began a suit for separation against her husband in the Superior Court. Upon the husband's promise to behave the suit was discontinued and the money was put in his hands. He put it in the bank in his own name. The Schroeders then resumed their relations and things ran smoothly for a few months. Then the husband resumed his old habits of abuse. The plantiff was compelled to leave him and now resides with her mother and supports herself by dressmaking.

The defendant, a tall, stout, florid German, youngish and clean shaven, walked forward to the railing in the most dramatic fashion, and, throwing out his chest, began:

"Judge, I wish you would listen to my story, I was compelled to leave my house. I should like to relate to you the history of my life, so that I may obtain justice."

"Oh, I haven't time to listen to the history of your life, answered Judge Bookstaver, "But, Judge," answered Schroeder, now almost on the point of tears, "If you will listen to my history you shall know all."

TUNISON'S TWO FAMILIES.

Mrs. Tunison Should Have a Divorce. In the action of Elizabeth Tunison for an absolute divorce from William C. Tunison, super-intendent of Station L of the city Post Office, Referee P. Tecumseh Sherman has filed a report in the Supreme Court in her favor. The referee finds that she should have the custody of their two children, Lulu, aged 16, and Maud B., 14, who have been living with the father. It was shown that Tunison has been living since March, 1893, at 56 West 123th street with Kate Kent, said to be his cousin. When the plaintiff called on him last October to see her daughters he said to the plaintiff, according to the evi-dence:

IS WEINIG GOOD OR BAD?

The Burden of Proof Apparently Lies on the Brooklyn Authorities, David Weinig, the young Austrian hatter, who is under arrest in Brooklyn charged with trying to extort money by representing himself as the Assistant Fire Marshal, was arraigned before Police Justice Tighe in the Adams Street Court yesterday morning. He succeeded, with the aid of Assistant Fire Marshal Thomas with the aid of Assistant Fire Marshal Thomas F. Freel of this city and against the protest of Fire Marshal Renjamin F. Lewis, in securing an adjournment and in having his bail reduced from $2,500 to $500.

Mr. Lewis said that several persons were in court ready to testify that the prisoner had tried to extort money from them. Mr. Freel said he believed that the arrest of the prisoner was a put up job, as he was a material witness against some persons accused of incendiarism. Police Superintendent Campbell and Inspector MacKellar, he said, were aware of the prisoner's connection with these cases. Justice Tighe adjourned the examination until Wednesday next.
Weinig occupies a curious position in relation to the Brooklyn police authorities. Some of the detectives regard him as a rascal who is making money by misrepresentation and extortion, while others say he was doing faithful work in trying to capture a gaing of dangerous incendiaries.
The mystery will perhaps be cleared up next Wednesday.

The Executive Committee of the Wheeling and Lake Eric Railway Company has recommended that the dividend on the preferred stock of the company for the quarter ending June 30 be not paid. This action is caused by the large decrease in business during the quarter on account of the strike of bituminous coal miners, which continued about two months, and the suspension of traffic resulting from the Debs insurrection. In a circular to the stockholders announcing this action the officers of the company stats:
"The deneral Manager anticipates that the traffic and earning during the next five months will be exceptionally large. The coal producers along the line have unlimited orders for coal, the supply of which in the Northwest Lake region is so low that the coal which was not hauled during the past three months will have to be carried during the remainder of the season. The cre business also promises to be unusually large, the amount of ore already contracted for to be delivered at the docks at fluron and Toledo for carriage over this company's line largely exceeding the whole of last season's ore tomage, For these reasons it has been urged that the preferred stock dividend should be paid as usual; but the Executive Committee determined that they could not anticipate future business, and that the question must be decided upon the earnings of the last quarter alone."

The Chesapeake and Ohio Railway Company, pending the preparation of its annual report, has, with commendable promptness, issued a statement of its profit and loss account for the year ending June 30. The figures show that the company, after charging off all miscellaneous items, earned the interest on all its bonds and a small surplus, viz., $14,057. Considering that this line is one of the large soft coal carriers, and that it has had to meet three strikes of miners since Jan. 1, including the great strike from the middle of April till the latter part of Jane, this is not a bad showing. A considerable amount of work in the way of betterments has been done during the year and included in operating expenses. The high physical condition of the property has been more than maintained during the year. The following are the figures:
